ABSTRACT

The Congress of the United States directed the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA) to "prepare the master calendar of events of local, State, National, and international significance which will take place between March 1975 and December 1976." This book, which is divided into six sections, contains the indexes and details of these Bicentennial activities. Sections 3, 4, and 5 comprise the bulk of the book: Section 3 includes five cross-referenced indexes; Section 4 is a concordance, or key word index; Section 5 contains details on all of the cataloged projects and events. ARBA gathers, organizes, disseminates, and archives Bicentennial data with the help of a computerized Bicentennial Information Network--BINET, through which subscribers have access to on-line, up-to-the-minute information. Information in this edition is from BINET files, and updates and replaces all previous editions. Information is current as of January 2, 1975, and catalogs 4,619 projects (described as a significant effort or program which results in a particular Bicentennial activity) and 1,512 events (described as a specific occurrence which takes place as part of a project).

FOREWORD

The Congress of the United States has directed the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA) to:

> "...prepare the master calendar of events of local, State, National, and international significance which will take place between March 1975 and December 1976....the Administrator shall provide for the bicentennial master calendar or register of programs and projects, and in other ways provide a central clearinghouse for information and coordination..." (Public Law 93-179)

This register is prepared and published by ARBA in accordance with this law.

The information contained in our Bicentennial Information Network system (BINET) is the major source of data that is used to produce this register, and will be used to produce master calendar publications later this year. The Master Calendar and Register will be able to serve their purposes only to the extent that Bicentennial planners continue to submit new and updated event and project information as the details of planned programs and activities become more firm.

The success of our efforts to meet both the congressional obligation and the public's need for a "central clearinghouse for information and coordination" is largely dependent on the cooperation of all sponsor, planning, and coordination agencies and organizations. We strongly urge you to join in this effort.

ABOUT THE BOOK

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

This book contains indexes and details of Bicentennial activities. For an overall view, you should know what is contained in each section. Section 2 consists of statistical summaries and special indexes listing the Bicentennial communities, projects of international scope, and projects officially recognized by ARBA.

The bulk of this book is Sections 3 and 4, indexes, and Section 5, project and event details. A distinction between project and event recurs throughout the book and should be understood. A project is a significant effort or program which results in a particular Bicentennial activity, and is designated by a six-digit number (e.g. 000209). An event is a specific occurrence which takes place as part of a project, is both site and time oriented, and is identified by a six-digit project number followed by a dash and three more digits (e.g. 000209-001).

Section 3 includes 5 cross reference indexes which permit you to find a project or event number. Use that number to find details in Section 5. Section 4 is a concordance, or key word index, to help you find the project or event by using important words in its title. Section 6, the Appendix, contains ARBA organizational information, instructions for supplying ARBA with project information, abbreviations, and a self-mailer reply and comments form.

HOW TO USE THE INDEXES IN SECTION 3

The examples below show how to use Sections 3, 4 and 5. The examples relate to the International Conference on World Food Problems, an event planned for 1976 by Iowa State University as part of its Bicentennial project, the World Food Conference. The major subject of the conference is agriculture, and it has special relevance to rural society. Note how the cross-reference indexes provide several ways to locate the project-number which will permit you to locate the conference in the 'Details' in Section 5.

HOW TO USE THE INDEXES IN SECTION 4

The index in section 4 refers to projects according to the major words appearing in the project title. The World Food Conference would appear in the key word index under all three words—"World," "Food," and "Conference," as all of them are of major significance. In some ways, this Key Word Index is the easiest to use. It can help you locate projects within specific categories, as well as being the most efficient way to find information on a project whose title you know.

Words that are contained in the titles of many projects, such as "American" or "Bicentennial" are not, for this index, considered to be key words.

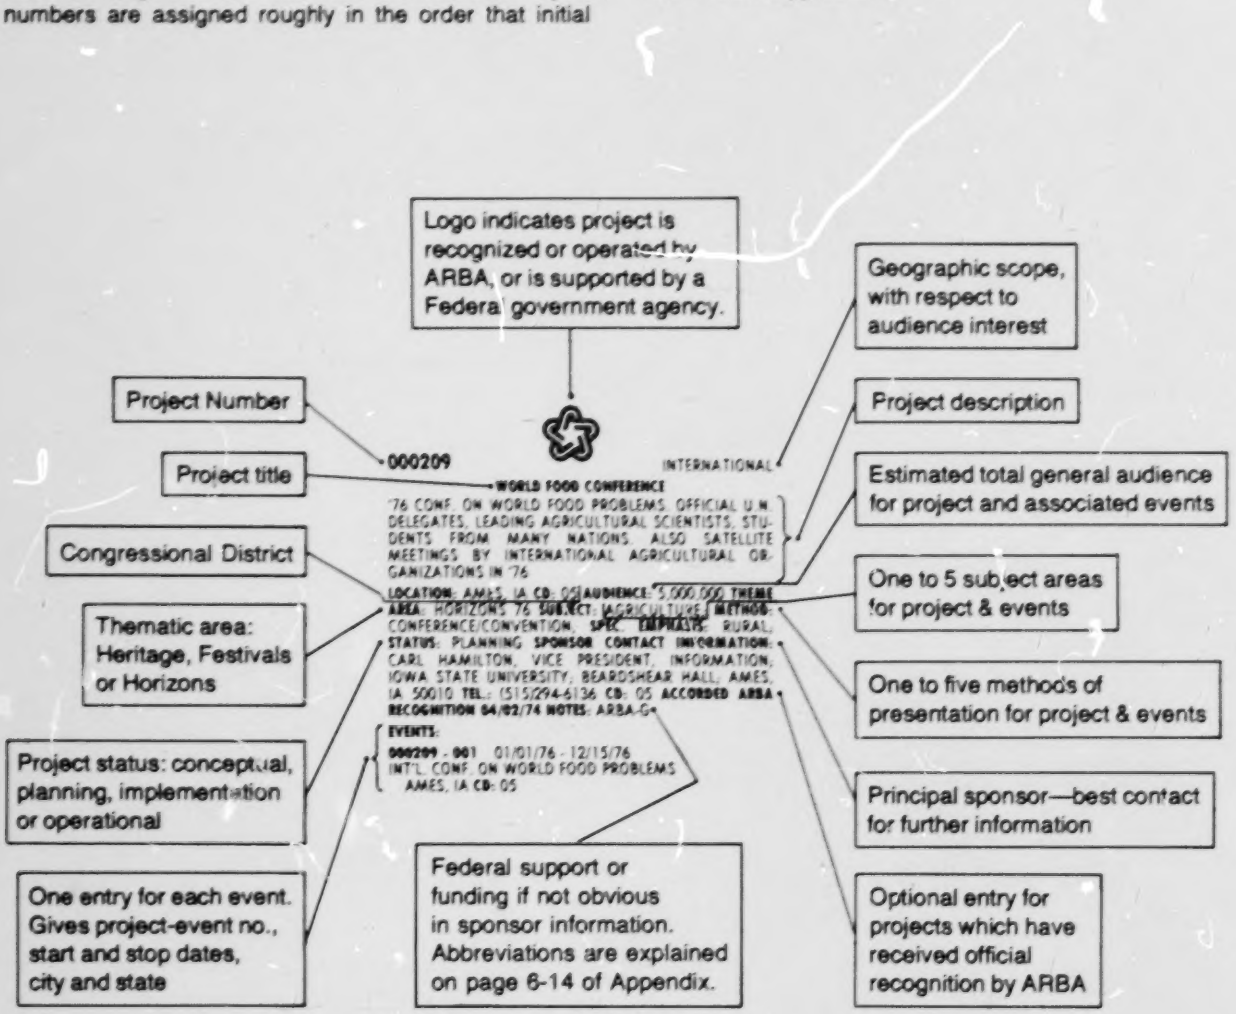
HOW TO USE THE DETAILS IN SECTION 5

The entries in section 5—detailed information about each project cataloged—are listed in project number order for easy cross-reference with the indexes. Project numbers are assigned roughly in the order that initial project information was received by ARBA and have no other significance. Further clarification of the terms used in these "details" is given in the Appendix: Input Form Instructions and Glossary. Abbreviations are also defined in the Appendix.



Logo indicates project is recognized or operated by ARBA, or is supported by a Federal government agency.

MASTER CALENDAR SERVICES AND BINET

The Master Calendar Services Division of ARBA is charged with preparation of the master calendar and provision of a national clearinghouse for all scheduled projects and events. This part of Section 1 explains how you may use the resources of Master Calendar Services and its computerized Bicentennial Information Network—BINET.

General

Preparation of a master calendar of Bicentennial activities is a primary objective of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. The Congressional mandate is quoted in the ARBA Administrator's foreword in this edition.

To fulfill this mandate, ARBA gathers, organizes, disseminates and archives data on Bicentennial events and projects with the help of a computerized Bicentennial Information Network—BINET.

Information on activities taking place from now, to and after 1977 is obtained from project sponsors and coordinative groups. It is distributed via publications and computer terminals to planners, participants and audiences. We provide information to all the people through a variety of our own, and non-government media.

We catalog the majority of activities at the national and international level. Information is also provided on many local, State and regional activities, as this information is made available to us. Descriptive, status, scope, audience and sponsor contact data is provided for each activity.

How To Get The Facts

For on-line, up-to-the-minute service, BINET subscribers make use of computer terminals—devices which resemble teletype machines. Such terminals are in use in many locations today, and can be connected to computers using ordinary telephones. When connected to BINET, the computer and terminal carry on a conversation with the user, who can scan the information contained in the BINET system in a number of different ways, to answer the question being asked.

A comprehensive master calendar publications program provides the same information in printed media, including complete master register catalogues, and time and geographically oriented event guides. Information on all activities is classified in manners which are broad enough in scope to permit easy access to event and project information contained in the BINET data base.

Tailor-made extracts of BINET data are prepared at cost, on request. News and travel services, the media, and government agencies depend on these reports to supplement the on-line and publications services.

BINET was developed by the staff of the ARBA, with assistance from the National Bureau of Standards, the General Services Administration, and Computer Sciences Corporation.

On-Line Service

All that is required for on-line use of the Bicentennial Information Network is a small, desk-top computer terminal and a telephone. BINET is part of the GSA National Teleprocessing Service, which has 13 local telephone access points in the major metropolitan areas. By dialing a local number in these areas, on-line terminal users may connect to the BINET system. All parts of the contiguous 48 United States are within 600 miles of a BINET access point, and special arrangements are being made for BINET usage in other places.

It must be emphasized that the master calendar information itself is free, but that the mechanism for providing it is not. In the case of the on-line user, the only costs are the actual operating costs of renting and using the computer terminal, and the telephone costs. The terminal can be any one of a variety which may be rented for $60-200 per month, depending upon type. The cost per hour for computer time when using BINET varies from $20 to $50, depending on contractual arrangement and type of usage. A typical question can be asked and answered in a few minutes, at a cost of $2-$5.

Federal agencies may use BINET through the National Teleprocessing Service (INFONET). This is done by submitting a Form 2068 (Application for ADP Service) to the General Services Administration. At the same time, the agency should apply to ARBA for access to BINET programs and data base, by a simple inter-agency memo request. Private organizations should contact ARBA concerning various arrangements under which they can access the BINET programs and data base. If it is desired to process BINET data on other computers, ARBA can prepare one-time or periodic copies of the information on magnetic tape, or can arrange other means of direct interface, at cost.

Publications

Project-oriented details for planners and coordinators can be obtained from the Official Master Register of Bicentennial Activities, published quarterly. This volume includes abstracts on thousands of Bicentennial activities, plus indexes to them arranged by subject, method of presentation, location, data, and interest-group emphasis. The Register also provides listings of recognized Bicentennial communities and significant international-audience programs and projects. Special notes are given for national recognition, Federal sponsorship or support, and certain kinds of funding. Full sponsor contact information is provided.

Event-oriented publications are produced by a variety of public and private organizations, based on data supplied by ARBA's BINET system. Some of these are produced directly by ARBA. Others meet the criteria of our licensing program, and are published by others as Officially Recognized master calendar publications. States, other governments, media outlets and commercial services prepare calendars in a variety of media based on BINET-supplied information.

Special Requests

Those who need tailor-made Bicentennial information or statistics use our Special Request Service. Bicentennial information may be extracted, sorted and/or counted using any one or a combination of data elements as criteria, and can be formatted and printed in any reasonable manner.

We have filled a wide variety of special requests: A study of Federal participation in the Bicentennial commemoration, including complete detailed information on each federally sponsored project indexed by sponsoring agency, subject, method of presentation, special emphasis and location. . . . State profiles, to aid State and local planners in preparing a balanced program of activities on the State level. . . . A member of the faculty at a prominent school of music received information on all musical projects planned for the Bicentennial.

To utilize this service, a request is made by mail or telephone to the Master Calendar Services staff at the address and phone number given below. The request should be explicit, but we will be glad to assist you in formulating the request. Our staff will then make an estimate of the cost of the resources to fulfill the request ($15 minimum charge). These resources include staff and computer time. After the estimate has been agreed to by the requestor, the special information request will be completed, and the requestor billed for the actual costs incurred.

Special Information Services:

The information contained in this book, since it was originally catalogued on the BINET computer system, can be selected, sorted, organized, and printed in a variety of ways on request, at cost. All of the lists, tables, indexes, and statistics which make up the Official Master Register, and make it so useful, have been prepared by processing a signle data base in different ways. The Master Calendar Services staff would be happy to prepare similar reports and summaries for interested persons. Some of the report services which are offered are discussed below. If there is a need for specialized Bicentennial information that cannot be filled by one of these programs, please contact us with a description of the requirements. Each request is handled individually, and can usually be satisfied in one week.

There is a charge for such specially prepared materials. A $15.00 minimum charge is imposed which covers the cost of computer time, staff time, and overhead. Beyond this, costs depend on the volume and format of the information desired. They usually vary from $25 to $100, but could be more. The BINET staff will provide a free cost estimate before acting upon a request, and will bill the requestor for the actual charges when the work is completed.

The procedures outlined below are available for repeated use. Perhaps your need may be filled by one. Or, they may suggest a different procedure that would fill your requirements.

Monthly Events Report: Produces a list of all events occurring within the month and year specified. Title, location, date, and BINET number are shown for each event listed. Printed in BINET project-event number order.

Program Balance Statistics: Several of these reports appears in this book. They can be produced to show different distributions: Sponsor Category across Project States, for example . . . or, the same distributions for selected kinds of projects; e.g. projects located in Florida.

Index Report: Like the Balance Statistics, these can be prepared for all or selected portions of the data base. This edition contains indexes for all cataloged activities. The same procedure could be used to produce indexes for a State, region, or congressional district; for all federally-supported programs; or according to other specialized criteria.

Abstract Reports: The Abstracts cataloged in this book are the most complete form of information on any project available from BINET. The Abstracts of specific kinds of all projects in a given sate can be sorted according to their city locations, or all those having "Architecture" for their subject can be sorted according to their sponsoring organization, to offer two examples.

State Summary Report: Produces a listing of all projects located within the State (or States) specified. Projects listed are grouped according to their thematic area (though this could be changed). BINET number and title are given for each project listed, as well as flags to indicate whether or not the project has received an ARBA grant, is located in an ARBA designated Bicentennial Community, or has gained its State's Bicentennial Commission recognition.

ARBA Recognized Projects Report: Lists all projects which have been accorded official ARBA recognition, showing the BINET number, title, and recognition date of each. Projects are listed in alphabetical or numerical order.

Congressional Districts Report: Lists the title and BINET number of all projects within each state, sorting them according to their congressional district. Can be prepared for one state alone.

International Projects Report: Produces a listing of all those projects with an international geographic scope. The BINET number and title are shown for each project listed. An example of this report appears in this edition.

Subsequent Projects Report: Provides the BINET number, title, and description for all projects starting from a specified project number, to the most recently entered project. Can be used as a supplement to the OMR, bringing old editions relatively up to date.

Mailing Labels: Gummed or "Cheshire" mailing labels can be prepared from the sponsor contact information given in the project abstract. Relevant addresses can be selected on the basis of any characteristic catalogued-subject, location, sponsor category, etc.

Key Word Index: As shown in this edition, key word indexes to all or selected portions of the cataloged Bicentennial information can be produced. Examples: Key word index for all exhibits, for all activities in a given State; for all Festival USA programs of national or international scope.

Sponsor Category Report: General or selective indexes of Bicentennial projects and events can be prepared. These are sorted by Sponsor Category and Name of sponsor organization, and show project and event number and titles.

Ranking Program: Lists of "important" activities can be prepared by a procedure that computes point values for each activity, and produces a list sorted by that point value. The requestor supplies his own arbitrary ranking criteria, with point spreads reflecting his own particular ideas of "importance."

Publisher's Aids: Other organizations may wish to reproduce and give further distribution to all or selected portions of this information. Any of the reports listed above may be delivered in the form of magnetic tape suitable for use in automated photo-typesetting procedures. The indexes, Key word listing, and abstracts in this book were produced through this process, using a Merganthaler Linotron 1010 operated by the Government Printing Office. Paginated repros (stats) of these sections can be provided, at cost of preparation.

OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED PROJECTS

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration has established criteria for extending official recognition at the national level to certain individual Bicentennial activities. Projects not officially recognized by ARBA are not permitted to use the logo. Below are the project numbers and titles of the 103 programs which have received ARBA's official recognition as of December 1974. Inquiries concerning official recognition should be addressed to: ARBA; Program Review and Evaluation; 2401 E St., N.W., Washington, DC 20276.

PROJECTS OF INTERNATIONAL SCOPE

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Principal sponsors of these 156 Bicentennial activities have classified them as being international in scope. "International," in this context, is one of five geographic scope categories depicting the population affected by, or audience interested in, the project and any associated events.

Below are project numbers and titles of all international-scope activities listed in this edition. Use the project number to look up further details in Section 5.

The following tables provide statistical information on the distribution of all cataloged Bicentennial activities by thematic area. Each program, by virtue of its major thrust, falls into one of three thematic areas. Those are: Heritage'76—Experiencing the heritage and values of this Nation (the past); Festival USA—Participating in festive and cultural events and projects honoring America's 200th anniversary commemoration (the present); Horizons '76—Establishing or achieving new goals during the Bicentennial Era (the future).

Reading down and across the columns, methodically or at random, should provide some sense of the range and concentration of Bicentennial activities, as well as reassurance and encouragement for those working to achieve a balanced program. For instance, one can find out quickly how many Horizons '76 projects are being sponsored by scientific groups, and compare that to the number being sponsored by education groups, or to the total number of projects having science and technology as their subject.

These reports were produced through our Special Information Request service. Other tailor-made reports and tabulations such as these can be prepared—see Section 1 for details.

Further clarification of the terms used in these tables is given in the Input form Instruction and Glossary, located in the Appendix, Section 6.

Most Bicentennial programs are of general interest. Some have content which is relevant to, or which is designed to appeal to, the special-emphasis groups listed above. Special reports on one or more of these groups can be prepared on request.

Because each project can be listed under more than one category, the total number of projects in this table may exceed the total number of projects in the OMR.

NATIONAL BICENTENNIAL COMMUNITIES PROGRAM

Developed by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and endorsed by The National League of Cities, The U.S. Conference of Mayors, and The National Association of Counties, this program offers an opportunity for every political sub-division to obtain national recognition and use of the Bicentennial symbol by developing programs and activities consistent with the three national themes: Heritage '76, Festival USA, and Horizons '76. Essential to designation is the requirement that at least one project be of lasting value to the community.

To become a Bicentennial Community, application forms must be obtained from your State Bicentennial Commission or from ARBA. Applications are reviewed by the State Commissions and Regional Offices, and sent to the National Headquarters for final review and designation as a Bicentennial Community.

As of December, 1974, 2109 Bicentennial Communities have been designated. Their names are listed alphabetically by State, and the State groups appear alphabetically.

4 KEY WORDS

Index of Projects by Key Words in Title 4-1

Each key word in each title is used to prepare this sorted list of project numbers and titles. While 4800 projects are indexed, about 19,000 entries appear in this index, as each title has an average of four key words. For example, the project "Hemispheric Conference for Women in 1976" appears 4 times—under the C's, H's, W's, and at the end of this section under the numerical part of the index.

Omitted from the index are words like A, AND, THE, OF, FROM, AMERICA, BICENTENNIAL, and many others which have no intrinsic or key meaning, in the context of this index.
